

Which devices are supplied with seals at the process connection?

Electronic pressure and temperature switches and pressure and temperature transmitters are supplied with seals at the process connection as standard (provided the process connection is designed accordingly).